

Integra LifeSciences Announces Instrument Repair Partnership With InstruMedics

PLAINSBORO, N.J., April 14, 2011 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Integra LifeSciences Holdings Corp (Nasdaq:IART) today announced a partnership with InstruMedics LLC., a national provider of service and repair for surgical instruments and equipment. The relationship will allow Integra's Surgical Instrument sales force to provide a comprehensive solution for managing the service and repair needs of surgical instruments, rigid endoscopes, flexible endoscopes, and powered surgical equipment.

"Our customers depend on us for their broad surgical instrument needs, and we are pleased to provide them with an equally comprehensive service model," said Dan Reuvers, President, Integra Surgical. "With InstruMedics' accommodating business model, our customers can receive services ranging from basic transactional, to van-based service, to an installed lab right inside our customers' facilities. We're convinced that we can help our customers limit uncertainty by ensuring that the surgical instruments they depend on are available, functioning in peak performance, when and where they need them."

Service and maintenance of surgical instruments and associated equipment is an important element in supporting a surgical environment. InstruMedics has an experienced management team, including members who have over 30 years of instrument repair experience. They support van-based repairs and InSite™ hospital-based repair labs, as well as a mail-in model that repairs items in their Ann Arbor, Michigan facility.

Integra is a leading provider of surgical instruments used in general surgery, neurosurgery, cardiac surgery and most other surgical modalities, as well as surgical retractor systems and illumination products. Integra's brands include recognized names like Luxtec®, Jarit®, Miltex®, Ruggles™, and Omni-Tract®.
